The CARE Clinic illustrates compassion for all people and puts the definition of neighbor into an enlarged context, beyond what people usually think of as a helping neighbor.

We provide free quality health care to the uninsured, low-income patients who live in Cumberland County and to be a force for a healthier community. Our mission was certainly accomplished recently with a patient named "June."

Many different types of people come to The CARE Clinic for help each week. But it's often those who have been helped repeatedly who are the most excited about sharing their experiences with others.

When "June" first came to The CARE Clinic several years ago, she was having so much trouble breathing at night that she was losing valuable sleep. Doctors at the clinic diagnosed her constant, wheezing cough as asthma and provided medication to alleviate her symptoms. With her doctor's encouragement, June also quit smoking in order to improve her condition.

Later, June developed carpal tunnel syndrome at work. She was suffering so much from pain in her hands that she was barely able to dress herself. Her hands were swollen up like balloons and she was in constant, excruciating pain.

So she returned to The CARE Clinic, where she was given a referral to see a specialist. The specialist discovered that she had rheumatoid arthritis in addition to carpal tunnel syndrome. June now takes medication for her symptoms and has improved dramatically. She is also trying to take better care of herself by getting daily exercise.

"I would be in trouble if I did not have this place," June says. "Even though I'm not paying, I'm still treated with respect. I had insurance up north and still wasn't treated the way I am here. They really care here."
